i have no religion, and i don't want one :)

i do, however, love learning about all religions. mythology totally fascinates me. spirituality, i mean.

i'm a Warrior Bitch, and tend to break myself out of boxes imposed upon me.

i think outside the lines. most religions i have taken forays into have a purpose.

my dad is a nut. seriously, he is quite mentally unstable, and when he gets into an obsession about how he has the world's answers, and he goes about to eventually convince everyone that he has founded "the one true religion" and he calls it the Persuasion Institute.)

his behavior has caused me to look closely at matters, and perhaps gave me insights i would have had otherwise.

this sounds like a very interesting forum.
