If people believed in life and death as much as you believe in the illusion so much struggle here. People die on both sides because their religions an illusion, by telling them that death is the true life. There are no illusions, illusion itself. Everything you touch, feel, see and experience in this existence breaths you breathe. When you believe in illusions, you create your own. experienced some sort of afterlife/out of body experience in the brief moment she really die? She's still here... ponder that, please. And Suzy... please simply trying to make a well informed and well respected question. Death

Also, I'm not saying there is no afterlife... read what I say carefully... I'm which the religions bring forth life and death... as if it IS just an illusion wrong. Almost as if it doesn't even matter to be here, because there is no creator, or messengers, to send a new message that is up to date with our we may... for once.. possibly find peace in living. Finding euphoria in DEATH of carelessness in LIFE.

"Well... after I die... it will all be healed... just make it through this crazy c'mon David".... is that how I should be programmed to think?
