If "we cannot bridge the gap between us and God. God must do it" why is punishment consistent with love? Moreover, where is the "free will" to do good and get "lovingly punished" (for eternity)...How can you love a God like that? I can never love.

When you see someone born in a poor country, dying at an early age (without being baptized and thus, gaining "God's salvation") and then having to go to hell, is this the love here? where is the opportunity for that person to do something good? "punishment" or was it a "reward"?
