The question of what happens with a newborn who dies suddenly.. hasn't Christianity cannot answer this question without throwing a lot of beliefs. You mentioned: " Whole countries starve because they believe a cow is thousands of them instead of eating them. They don't know how to farm. People like you and me to give time, money or knowledge to plant or provide.

The whole world is being depleted of natural resources because some people use "toys" and they don't suffer. It takes 2500 gallons of water to produce a pound of wheat. only 2% of the water in the earth is used for agriculture. Another consequence of using land for cattle so some people can enjoy a better life. Countries know that a cow gives different things to men. Milk, and milk products. Cow dung and urine is used as medicine... to kill a cow just to have meat for food. It is not morally wrong. Someone that cannot see suffering in animals is completely wrong.

Your idea of those people "who don't know how to farm" is completely wrong. The world as a big picture.

Overpopulation and the fact that money "talks" are the main causes of the problem. but rather for other things that are believed to bring money (supply and demand). Lack of knowledge is the cause of this problem.
