To Brendalee: Yes, I do believe in the power of the Holy Spirit. I believe in the gift and as a means of individual prayer. I believe God can heal and do u also believe that many who disagree on doctrinal matters in the Body of the rest of us. Why? Because some of every tribe, nation, and tongue will God with those who do believe in miracles and tongues, according to Rev condoning a general spirituality in any way! The defining saving doctrine Christ as the atonement for our sins, as individuals. It is just that the p manifested in miracles alone. Jesus had 34 miracles documented during course, many more must have occurred, but it was the preaching of the W the power of the Holy Spirit, and that was the main focus of His ministry brokenhearted, and set the captives free, primarily through the power of of the Word of God, which He embodied. So, when attempting to discern acknowledge the power of the Holy Spirit, do not forget that many of our not speak in tongues, do believe and heal via the preaching and speaking and lives of the lost and broken. Thanks for reading my humble opinion.
