For those who've read Karl Marx Communist Manifesto, it is a great dream that the working classes will never be the entrepreneurs. Just like the worker queen; some are born to do certain jobs, and some are more adept at organizing the game.

Leninism was to enforce a dictatorship communistic state, which then defines a communistic society - who work together for the greater goal. Instead it rules over the people.

Maoism was trying to make the working class overthrow the capitalist elite entrepreneur still filtering through later, and modern day China is again revolutionary Maoist trying to overthrow the Capitalist system again.

For Marx Manifesto to be functional, we need to recognize that to have efficient structuring of a system, leads to greater production. When any given person has their own levels of efficiency, leads to greater wealth for themselves, people work and more consciously to achieve more. There is a sense of pride at knowing that between us, it doesn't pay to only employ staff, and exploit them, as when we reach the end goals, they will strive to reach it. When they realize their own contributions and benefits, they will also put their whole efforts into ways to achieve this.

These systems need to be there within all aspects of society, not just a few listed; yet cleaners, bin men, road sweepers, who literally are financed by the system. Sweepers, cleaners, were given the right to prosecute those who would take shortcuts that wouldn't happen, as their sense of pride at achieving our goals, would make them more respectful of the whole. Since they're no longer seen as the lower working class, they have authority; yet the achievers who make sure the system functions cleanly, they are given the right to cooperate or face consequences.
