Religious texts describe something that is beyond form, that formulates a concept where mathematics, logic, and quantification comes from.

Buddha called it 'the Universal Mind', which is equal to saying something like a Central Processor Unit.

Lao Tzu calls this the Dao, saying it is where all wisdom, and the logic behind it. Krishna describes something unmanifest, unknowable, yet manifesting everywhere. Back then without computers, we didn't have a way we could state, that there was a Universal Quantum Computer.

The Hindu ideologies describe here as being an artificial reality (Maya), which is (Source's) imagination.

Ancient Greek Logic is that, Chronos (Time/Order = CPU) formulated the concept of an artificial reality, that we exist within.
