Hi, this is dude here. I would like to share some thoughts about the Holy Spirit. When I read the bible I see the Father mentioned, and the Holy Spirit. I also see the Holy Ghost. That adds up to four in the Godhead, and not three. I have found out the catholic church came up with the concept of the trinity. That was until the papacy became an institution, and started to change much of the bible.

Further study of ancient hebrew texts show that the holy spirit is feminine. So there seems to be male and female parts to the Godhead. Of course, the Father and the Son, and intent, and character.

What we are dealing with is something the bible only mentions one time, "The Mystery of God". This is how it appears to work. When God created the angels, they materialized by the working of the feminine or Holy Spirit, this is how they speak. Similarly when Jesus spoke life onto planet earth, the feminine of the Holy Spirit lifeforms as Jesus spoke. Jesus is diety, like our Father. So he works in the same way. His counterpart is the Holy Spirit, and Jesus counterpart appears to be the Holy Spirit.

Now Jesus was begotten, or born. He was not created like the angels, but in some kind, between the Father and Mother (holy spirit).. Evidence points to the fact that Jesus has to have a counterpart. So Jesus apparently was born with a twin sister. This is why the bible records the Holy Spirit and the Holy Ghost, along with the Father and the Son. That adds up to four in the Godhead, no matter how you approach it. The catholic church came up with three, from four parts. I don't trust any organization that adds up to three, wrong there.. Stay away from them, please...

Now this implies the Holy Spirit is the Mother of us all. And we all know who Jesus is, our big brother, and now we have a big sister, the Holy Spirit. It is important that He ascend to heaven, so he could send the comforter, or the Holy Spirit. I don't say He was going to send the Holy Spirit, but He was going to send the Holy Spirit. At pentecost that the Holy Ghost came, like wind and fire, with tongues of fire. The 120, they became filled with this spirit and spoke in tongues. I am a tourist who was there about two yrs ago. But not everyone will speak in tongues who is saved. The Holy Spirit is one of many gifts.

It would seem that as born again believers, we have the Holy Spirit, and the Holy Spirit. One connects us to the Father, and the other connects us to Jesus. At the cross, there are four major directions, there are four winds over the earth. The pattern of four, has to do with the fact that there is four in the Godhead.

Christian mysticism is inspirational, it opens christians minds, that are designed to do just that... peace to you.
